

Notes from the Editor

The journal's book review editors, Dr. Simona Capisani and Dr. Yasha Rohwer, are stepping down after years of service, each to pursue other projects. I thank them for their service to the journal and wish them well with their new endeavors; it's been a pleasure working with them. At the same time, I am pleased to announce the appointment of two new book review editors, Dr. Julia Gibson and Dr. Arthur Obst.

We are sad to note the passing of influential environmental philosopher Mark Sagoff (1941–2023). Heartfelt and informative writings in memoriam can be found online at The Institute for Philosophy and Public Policy (<https://www.ippg.gmu.edu/post/in-memoriam-mark-sagoff-1941-2023>) and the Washington Post (https://www.washingtonpost.com/obituaries/2023/12/19/mark-sagoff-philosopher-nature/?_pml=1).

The current issue of the journal is a special issue on private property and the environment. Guest editors Eric Fabri and Pierre Crétois have assembled four papers representative of important work being done in this area. Finally, this issue also contains a brief critical comment followed by the author's reply concerning the 2022 article "The Cost of Denying Intrinsic Value in Nature," by Lars Samuelsson (Environmental Ethics 44[3]: 267–288).
