About Our Contributors

Adam D. Bailey is a PhD student in philosophy at the University of South Carolina, and a professor of management at Black Hills State University. He received his PhD in Business Administration from Texas Tech University. He has published research articles in a variety of journals including the American Catholic Philosophical Quarterly, American Journal of Jurisprudence, Business and Society Review, Business Ethics Quarterly, Educational Theory, International Philosophical Quarterly, and Philosophia.

Samuel Kahn is currently an Associate Professor of Philosophy at Indiana University-Purdue University, Indianapolis. He received dual degrees in Philosophy and Bioengineering in 2005 from the University of Pennsylvania, and he received a PhD in Philosophy in 2012 from Stanford University. He has been the recipient of numerous prizes and scholarships, including a Fulbright in 2008 and a Geballe in 2011. In 2013 Samuel won the Review of Metaphysics dissertation essay contest, and in 2015 he was included in the Prindle Institute for Ethics Young Philosophers Lecture Series. His work on Kant has won the prestigious Markus Herz prize (2011), and he is the first person to win the North American Kant Society Wilfrid Sellars prize twice (2019, 2021). He has published over 30 articles and book reviews in journals including Ethics, Kantian Review, Kant Studien, and British Journal for the History of Philosophy. His first research monograph, Kant, Ought Implies Can, the Principle of Alternate Possibilities, and Happiness, appeared with an imprint of Rowman & Littlefield in 2018; his second, Kant’s Theory of Conscience, appeared in the Cambridge University Press Element series in 2021.

Timothy Kearns is a lecturer at The College of Humanities of the Legionaries of Christ (Cheshire CT 06410). He received his doctorate from the Catholic University of America and has previously published articles in the International Philosophical Quarterly, Proceedings of the American Catholic Philosophical Association, the Proceedings of the American Maritain Association, and LOGOS. His areas of special interest are philosophy of nature, logic and mathematics, philosophy of the humanities, and the integration of knowledge across disciplines.

Grégoire Leftz graduated from the École Normale Supérieure in Paris, and received his PhD from Sorbonne University. His main publications bear on the philosophy of Charles Taylor, metaphysics (especially identity), and metaethics, including the paper “Can moral minimalism be saved?”
Thierry Meynard, SJ, is a Professor of Philosophy at Sun Yat-Sen University in Guangzhou, China. He received his PhD in philosophy from Peking University. His interests lie in Chinese philosophy and the reception of Western philosophy in China. He is the author of The Jesuit Reading of Confucius (Brill 2015) and Confucius Sinarum Philosophus (AHSI, 2011), as well as various articles.

Eric Shoemaker is a PhD Candidate at the University of Toronto’s department of philosophy. Eric researches new democratic institutions, such as participatory budgeting, and political random selection, and what analysis of these institutions can tell us about the nature and value of democracy.

Richard White is a Professor of Philosophy at Creighton University in Omaha. He has special interests in the Philosophy of Spirituality, Recent Continental Philosophy, the Philosophy of Love and Sex, and the Philosophy of Literature. Recent books include: Reflections on God and the Death of God (2022); Spiritual Philosophers: From Schopenhauer to Irigaray (2020); The Spiritual Guide: Four Steps on the Path of Enlightenment (2016).

B. A. Worthington graduated from the universities of Oxford, Belfast, and Sussex before taking his doctorate at the University of East Anglia. He formerly taught at the universities of Genoa and Urbino in Italy. He has written on the interpretation of the mystical passages of the Tractatus and their implications for understanding the whole work. More recently he has been interested in metaphysical questions arising out of the Tractatus.