

About the Authors

Steven Abell received his Ph.D. from Loyola University Chicago, and is currently a professor of psychology at the University of Detroit Mercy. He is board certified in clinical psychology by the American Board of Professional Psychology. His scholarly interests include contemporary psychotherapy theory and practice, child psychology, and psycho-dynamically oriented approaches to personality theory.

Msgr. Robert J. Batule is a priest of the Diocese of Rockville Centre in New York. He is currently assigned to the faculty of Saint Joseph Seminary in Yonkers, New York, where he teaches dogmatic theology. He has been Editor-in-Chief of the Catholic Social Science Review since 2018. His articles, essays, and book reviews on any number of topics have appeared in journals, magazines, and newspapers over the last couple of decades.

James Berquist received his B.A. in liberal arts from Thomas Aquinas College and his M.A. in philosophy from the University of Dallas. He is a doctoral candidate in philosophy at the Institute of Philosophic Studies at the University of Dallas. His dissertation is on Aquinas's conception of natural law. He regularly contributes conference papers and scholarly articles on topics pertaining to natural law, liberal arts education, and Catholic doctrine. He currently teaches philosophy at Ventura College in Southern California.

Fr. Michael Bissex is an alumnus of Theological College and the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C., where he received his licentiate in philosophy in 2013. He then continued his seminary studies at the North American College in Rome, where he earned his S.T.B from the Pontifical Gregorian University. Fr. Bissex was ordained a priest in 2017 for the Diocese of Rockville Centre in New York and currently serves as a parochial vicar at Saint Patrick Church in Huntington, New York.

Fred D. Boley is a graduate of the University of Michigan, Fuller Theological Seminary, Kings College (London), and Regent University, where he defended a philosophical dissertation in counselor education. He is in private practice online and in Missouri, where he oversees a funded research grant into spiritually-informed psychotherapy. Dr. Boley is a convert to the Catholic faith.

Steven J. Brust is assistant professor of political science at Eastern New Mexico University, where he teaches courses in American government and political theory. For three years, he was associate director of the Tocqueville Forum on the Roots of American Democracy at Georgetown University. He received his doctorate in political theory from the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. He is co-editor of Natural Law Today: The Present State of the Perennial Philosophy. His articles have appeared in a variety of journals including the Catholic Social Science Review and the Ave Maria Law Review.

David W. Bryant is an assistant professor of business and the executive director of the Cray Center of Entrepreneurship at Benedictine College in Achison, Kansas. He received a B.A. in economics from Hampden-Sydney College, an M.B.A from the University of North Carolina (Wilmington), and a Ph.D. in entrepreneurial leadership from Regent University. He teaches courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels in entrepreneurship, management, and corporate social responsibility.

Peter J. Colosi is associate professor of philosophy at Salve Regina University in Newport, Rhode Island. He holds degrees from Franciscan University (mathematics), Saint Bonaventure University (Franciscan studies), and the International Academy of Philosophy in the Principality of Liechtenstein. His recent publications include “A Catholic Anthropology and Medical Ethics,” in Catholic Witness in Health Care (Catholic University of America Press, 2017); and “The United States Bishops vs. the HHS Contraception Mandate: A Question of Religious Freedom, Moral Truth or Both?,” in Why Humanae Vitae is Still Right (Ignatius Press, 2018).

Michael Curry serves as instructor of economics at Aquinas College in Grand Rapids, Michigan. His scholarly interests include the moral, political, and economic foundations of civil society. After earning his B.A. in liberal studies from Grand Valley State University, he was awarded a Wilbur Fellow under political theorist, historian, and social critic Russell Kirk. He earned his M.A. in economics from Walsh College and begins doctoral studies at Saint Mary’s University in London in the autumn of 2019.

Paul R. DeHart is associate professor of political science at Texas State University, where he specializes in natural law, social contract theory, the grounds of political authority and obligation, the relationship between religion and political order, and the American founding. He is the author of Uncovering the Constitution’s Moral Design (University of Missouri Press) and editor (with Carson Holloway) of Reason, Revelation and the Civic Order: Political Philosophy and the Claims of Faith (Northern Illinois University Press).

Andrew M. Essig is a professor of political science at DeSales University in Center Valley, Pennsylvania. He received his B.A. in economics from Saint Joseph's University and his M.A. and doctorate from Penn State University in political science. His areas of interest include the development of a core theory in international relations, moral realism, and U.S.–Holy See diplomatic relations. He teaches courses in international relations and political philosophy.

Jerome C. Foss is associate professor of politics and the director of the Saint Vincent Center for Catholic Thought and Culture at Saint Vincent College in Latrobe, Pennsylvania. He writes in the areas of Catholic political thought, American political thought, and literature and politics. His most recent book is Flannery O'Connor and the Perils of Governing by Tenderness (Lexington, 2019).

James R. Gaston is the founding director of the Humanities and Catholic Culture Major (1990), and an associate professor of history at the Franciscan University of Steubenville, Ohio. Professor Gaston received his doctoral degree at SUNY Buffalo. His scholarly interests include the thought of Christopher Dawson, the history of Christian culture in Europe and America, and the nature of Christian masculinity.

Kevin H. Govern began his legal career as an Army judge advocate, serving twenty years at every echelon during peacetime and war in worldwide assignments involving every legal discipline. He is a professor of law at Ave Maria School of Law, and has served as an assistant professor of law at the United States Military Academy at West Point. He has published widely and spoken frequently on international and comparative law, national security and homeland security, jurisprudence, law and religion, military operations, and professional ethics.

Kenneth L. Grasso is professor of political science at Texas State University. He has edited or co-edited several books, including Theology and Public Philosophy (Lexington Books, 2012) and Rethinking Rights: Historical, Political and Philosophical Perspectives (University of Missouri Press, 2008). He is currently the first vice-president of the Society of Catholic Social Scientists and is a research associate at the Veritas Center for Ethics in Public Life.

James R. Kelly received his doctoral degree from Harvard University and taught at Fordham University from 1971 until 2010 when he became emeritus. His chief areas of research have been in the sociology of religion and civic conflict. He has published widely throughout his career and has published research for the United States Catholic Conference, the Lily Foundation, and the National Office of Ecumenical Officers. He also served as the first executive secretary of the Cardinal Bernardin Common Ground Catholic Initiative.

Stephen M. Krason is professor of political science and legal studies at Franciscan University of Steubenville in Ohio, where he has been on the faculty since 1986. He has also been a visiting professor at the Ave Maria School of Law. He is the co-founder and president of the Society of Catholic Social Scientists. His books include Abortion: Politics, Morality, and the Constitution; Preserving a Good Political Order and a Democratic Republic; The Transformation of the American Democratic Republic; and Catholicism and American Political Ideologies.

Gerard M. McKeegan is a retired consultant in the field of pharmacology. He was born and raised in Philadelphia. He entered military service in 1966 and served nearly ten years on active duty, including one year as a unit commander in Vietnam. He taught pharmacology for ten years in the School of Nursing at Lycoming College. From 2007 to 2016, he worked for Procure Hospice Care, which provides clinical pharmacy services to over one hundred hospice organizations around the United States.

Guillermo Montes is an associate professor of executive leadership at the Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. School of Education at Saint John Fisher and part-time senior research associate at Children's Institute, a non-profit organization associated with the University of Rochester's Department of Clinical and Social Sciences in Psychology. He is an economist and quantitative methods researcher with an interest in the intersection of the social sciences with Catholic social teaching.

John P. Moran is a professor of political science and international affairs at Kennesaw State University in Georgia. He received a B.S. from Georgetown University and his M.S. and doctoral degree from the George Washington University. He is the author of From Garrison State to Nation-State: Political Power and the Russian Military under Gorbachev and Yeltsin (Praeger, 2002) and The Solution of the Fist: Dostoevsky and the Roots of Modern Terrorism (Lexington, 2009). At Kennesaw State University, he is the coordinator of the international affairs major and the co-director of the Great Books program.

Richard S. Myers is professor of law at Ave Maria School of Law. He is a graduate of Kenyon College and Notre Dame Law School. He taught at Case Western Reserve University School of Law and the University of Detroit Mercy School of Law before moving to Ann Arbor, Michigan, to help start Ave Maria School of Law. He is the co-editor of St. Thomas Aquinas and the Natural Law Tradition: Contemporary Perspectives (2004). He also co-edited the Encyclopedia of Catholic Social Thought, Social Science, and Social Policy (2007, 2012).

Nathan Pinkoski is an associate research scholar in the James Madison Program in American Ideals and Institutions and a lecturer in politics at Princeton University. He holds a B.A. (with honors) from the University of Alberta and an MPhil and DPhil in politics from the University of Oxford. His research interests include twentieth-century political thought, early modern political thought, and classical political thought. In 2019–2020, he will take up a research fellowship at the University of Toronto.

John F. Quinn is professor of history at Salve Regina University in Newport, Rhode Island. He is the author of Father Mathew's Crusade: Temperance in Nineteenth-Century Ireland and Irish America and his articles have appeared in the Catholic Historical Review, the New England Quarterly, American Catholic Studies, and Crisis.

Grazia Mangano Ragazzi is an independent researcher in Washington, D.C. Her monograph on discretion/prudence in the spirituality of Saint Catherine of Siena is available in Italian, French, and English. She has four degrees in three different languages, from the Pontifical University of Saint Thomas (Angelicum), Cambridge University, and the Institut Catholique in Paris.

Ronald J. Rychlak is the Jamie L. Whitten Chair of Law and Government at the University of Mississippi School of Law. He also serves as president of the Southeast Association of Law Schools. He has authored or edited eleven books and numerous articles. He serves on the Mississippi Advisory Committee to the United States Civil Rights Commission and is an advisor to the Holy See's delegation to the United Nations.

D. Brian Scarnecchia is a professor of law at Ave Maria School of Law in Naples, Florida, where he teaches jurisprudence, bioethics and Catholic Social Teaching and the law. He is the author of Bioethics, Law and Human Life Issues: A Catholic Perspective on Marriage, Family, Contraception, Abortion, Reproductive Technology, and Death and Dying and co-authored Millennium Development Goals in Light of Catholic Social Thought and numerous scholarly and popular articles.

J. Marianne Siegmund received her B.A. from Christendom College, her M.A. in religious studies/catechetics from the Notre Dame Graduate School of Christendom College, a license from the Pontifical John Paul II Institute for Studies on Marriage and Family at the Catholic University of America, and a doctoral degree from the Pontifical University of Saint

About the Authors

Thomas (Angelicum). She has lectured, delivered scholarly papers, and published several articles in both philosophy and theology. She currently teaches for Holy Apostles College and Seminary in Connecticut.

David A. Tamisiea is the Interim Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences at the University of Mary in North Dakota, where he also is an associate professor of theology. He previously served as the director of the Saint Philip Institute of Catechesis and Evangelization for the Diocese of Tyler in Texas. Prior to his career in academia, he was a practicing attorney in Dallas, Texas. He holds degrees from the University of Notre Dame (B.A.), the University of Texas at Austin (J.D.) and Ave Maria University (M.A. and Ph.D.).

Adam L. Tate is professor of history and chair of the Department of Humanities at Clayton State University in Morrow, Georgia.

Joseph A. Varacalli is a SUNY Distinguished Professor of Sociology at the Nassau Community College in Garden City, New York. He is the author of numerous publications, including Bright Promise, Failed Community: Catholics and the American Public Order (Lexington Books) and The Catholic Experience in America (Greenwood Books). He co-edited volumes one through three of Catholic Social Thought, Social Science and Social Policy (2007, 2012). In 1992, he founded the Society of Catholic Social Scientists along with Dr. Stephen M. Krason.

Thomas F. X. Varacalli is lecturer of political science at Texas State University. His articles and reviews have appeared in a variety of journals, including History of Political Thought, Naval War College Review, and Logos. He received his doctoral degree from the Louisiana State University.

Eric Wearne is the provost of Holy Spirit College in Atlanta, Georgia. His research areas include school choice, education policy, and the history of American education. He began his career as a high school teacher of English and debate. He was once a professor at Georgia Gwinnett College and deputy director of the Governor's Office of Student Achievement in Atlanta.