

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Alex Bundy is Ph.D. candidate at the University of California, Santa Barbara, Department of Philosophy, with a dissertation on “The Epistemic Significance of Belief.” He received, in 2006, the Alfred B. Glathe Award at California State University, Los Angeles. While his main area of specialization is epistemology, his academic interests include ethics, philosophy of language, metaphysics, and philosophy of mind. He is the author of “On ‘Epistemic Permissivism’” (with Anthony Brueckner), forthcoming in Synthese, 2011. Contact: bundy@umail.ucsb.edu

Richard David-Rus is researcher at the Institute of Anthropology Francisc I. Rainer of the Romanian Academy, Bucharest. He obtained his Ph. D. title at the University of Munich, with a dissertation entitled Explanation and Understanding through Scientific Models. Perspectives for a New Approach to Scientific Explanation. His main philosophical interests are in general philosophy of science, especially the topic of scientific explanation and understanding, and its problems in the field of biological and social sciences. He is also active as a statistician in the field of life sciences. Contact: rusdavid@gmail.com

Jeremy Fantl is Associate Professor at the Department of Philosophy, University of Calgary. His main area of specialization is epistemology. Other areas of interest are ethics, metaphysics and early British philosophy. He is the authors of two books: Knowledge in an Uncertain World, with Matthew McGrath (2009) and Epistemology: An Anthology with Ernest Sosa, Jaegwon Kim, and Matthew McGrath (2000, 2nd edition 2008) and of many articles among which “Is Metaethics Morally Neutral?” (Pacific Philosophical Quarterly, 2006), “Analysis of the A Priori and A Posteriori” (Acta Analytica, 2003), and “Modest Informatism” (Canadian Journal of Philosophy, 2003). Contact: jfantl@ucalgary.ca

John F. Hendricks is Professor of Formal Philosophy in the Department of Media, Cognition and Communication/Section for Philosophy, University of Copenhagen, Denmark. Besides formal philosophy, he is interested in logic, epistemology, and philosophy of science. He is Director of FLOG - The Danish Network for Philosophical Logic and Its Applications, and founding editor-in-chief of FNEWS - The Free Newsletter for Philosophical Logic and Its Applications published by

Springer. His publications include Mainstream and Formal Epistemology (2006), Thought2Talk: A Crash Course in Reflection and Expression (2006), The Convergence of Scientific Knowledge – a view from the limit (2001). Contact: vincent@hum.ku.dk

Mark McBride is a Ph.D. candidate at the Faculty of Philosophy, Oxford University and a Ph. D. in Law at Cambridge University, Trinity Hall. His areas of specialization are epistemology, philosophy of mind, ethics, and legal philosophy. His publications include “Is Knowledge Closed under Known Entailment? The Strange Case of Hawthorne’s ‘Heavyweight Conjunction’ (and Other Strange Cases)” (Theoria, 2009), “A Challenge for New Defenders of the Doctrine of Double Effect” (Journal of Ethics & Social Philosophy, 2010), and “Reply to Pardo: Unsafe Legal Knowledge?” (Legal Theory, 2011). Contact: markmcbride1978@gmail.com

Rhys Mckinnon is Ph. D. candidate and lecturer in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Waterloo, Ontario, Canada. His main areas of specialization are epistemology, philosophy of language, norms of assertion and rational decision theory. He is also interested in ethics, meta-ethics and metaphysics. His papers include “Giving Warrant Credit in Warranted Assertibility,” presented to Amsterdam Graduate Philosophy Conference, Universiteit van Amsterdam, 2010 and “Rationalizing Non-Rational Choice Situations,” presented to Canadian Philosophical Association, York University, 2006. Contact: rmckinno@uwaterloo.ca

Nicholas Rescher is Distinguished University Professor of Philosophy at University of Pittsburgh where he is currently Chairman of the Center for Philosophy of Science. He wrote more than one hundred books ranging over all areas of philosophy (sixteen of them translated from English into eight other languages). Among these: The Coherence Theory of Truth (1973, 2nd edition 1982), Dialectics: A Controversy-Oriented Approach to the Theory of Knowledge (1977), Satisfying Reason: Studies in the Theory of Knowledge (1995), Epistemology: On the Scope and Limits of Knowledge (2003), and Common Sense: A New Look at an Old Tradition (2005), etc. Contact: rescher@pitt.edu

Gerard Leonid Stan is Associate Professor at the Faculty of Philosophy and Socio-Political Sciences, Alexandru Ioan Cuza University of Iași. As of April 2011 he is a Postdoctoral Fellow of the Romanian Academy. His academic interests include epistemology, philosophy of science and the cognitive foundations of communication. He is the author of two books: Knowledge and Truth (2006, in Romanian) and The Natural Order and the Laws of Science (2004, in Romanian). Contact: gstan@uaic.ro

John Symons is Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Philosophy at the University of Texas at El Paso, USA. His main interests are metaphysics, philosophy of mind, philosophy of science, and epistemology. His recent work focuses on the problem of emergence as it figures in traditional metaphysics and in the sciences. Since 2002 he is Editor-in-Chief of Synthese. An International Journal for Epistemology, Methodology and Philosophy of Science. His books include On Dennett (2002, translated into Slovak and French), Logic and Reasoning (forthcoming) and The Science of Seeing: Vision after Marr (forthcoming). He is also preparing a book called Novelty: Laws, Models and Emergent Properties in Science. Contact: jsymons@utep.edu

Zoltán Vecsey is a member of the Research Group for Theoretical Linguistics at the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, where he received, in 2007, the Bolyai Research Prize. His main academic interests are theoretical linguistics, semiotics, and epistemology. He is the author of Names and Objects. On the Semantics of Proper Names (2007, in Hungarian), the editor of: Dimensions of Meaning. Modal Theories after Kripke (2003, in Hungarian) and co-editor of: Who was Sherlock Holmes? Studies on the Semantics of Proper Names (2005), Frege Today (2006) and Perspective and Meaning (2010) – all of them in Hungarian. Contact: vecseyz@freemail.hu