

NOTES ON THE CONTRIBUTORS

Christopher Bobier is a graduate student at the University of California, Irvine. His main areas of research are in metaphysics, epistemology and philosophy of science. His most recent publication is “God, Time and the Kalam Cosmological Argument” (forthcoming in Sophia, 2013). Contact: cbobier@uci.edu.

Rachael Briggs is a Research Fellow in the School of Philosophy at the Australian National University. Her interests include formal epistemology, metaphysics (particularly the metaphysics of chance), and value theory (particularly theories of wellbeing). Two of her articles are recognized in Philosopher's Annual list of the 10 best articles in philosophy published each year: “Distorted Reflection” (Philosophical Review, 2009), and “Decision Theoretic Paradoxes as Voting Paradoxes” (Philosophical Review, 2010). Contact: formal.epistemology@gmail.com.

Arnold Cusmariu has published on topics in metaphysics, epistemology, the philosophy of mathematics, the philosophy of mind and aesthetics in Philosophical Studies, Analysis, Southern Journal of Philosophy, Erkenntnis, Australasian Journal of Philosophy, and Grazer Philosophische Studien. Abstracts of his publications are available at <http://philpapers.org/s/Arnold%20Cusmariu>. His most recent publication is “The Structure of an Aesthetic Revolution” (Journal of Visual Arts Practice, 2009), which lays out the philosophical foundations of his work as a sculptor. An article titled “Baudelaire’s Critique of Sculpture” was presented in 2011 at meetings of the American Society for Aesthetics in California, Pennsylvania and Florida. Also a screenwriter, Dr. Cusmariu’s scripts are available at www.zoetrope.com. Contact: bravo323@gmail.com.

Barry Lam is Assistant Professor in the Department of Philosophy at Vassar College. He primarily works in epistemology and the philosophy of language. Some of his current publications are “The Rationality of Belief Invariance in Light of Peer Disagreement” (Philosophical Review, 2011) and “Calibrated Probabilities and the Epistemology of Disagreement” (forthcoming in Synthese). Contact: balam@vassar.edu.

Mark McBride is Assistant Professor at the National University of Singapore. Mark has written on diverse topics in epistemology, ethics, and legal philosophy. He published in Logos & Episteme “A Puzzle for Dogmatism” and “Evidence and Transmission Failure” (both in 2011). For more information on Mark's work, please visit his website: <https://sites.google.com/site/markmcbride1978/>. Contact: markmcbride1978@gmail.com.

Rachel McKinnon, PhD, is a lecturer in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Waterloo. Her primary areas of research are epistemology and philosophy of language, particularly the norms of assertion. Her research also includes work in action theory, decision theory, meta-ethics, metaphysics, and gender issues. Her papers include “The Supportive Reasons Norm of Assertion” (American Philosophical Quarterly, forthcoming), “Irkesome Assertions” (with John Turri, Philosophical Studies, forthcoming), and “How Do You Know That 'How Do You Know?' Challenges a Speaker's Knowledge?” (Pacific Philosophical Quarterly, 2012).

Daniel Nolan is Professor of Philosophy in the School of Philosophy at the Australian National University. He is interested in many areas of philosophy, but particularly metaphysics, philosophy of science, philosophy of logic and language, and metaethics. He is the author of David Lewis (Acumen, 2005) and Topics in the Philosophy of Possible Worlds (Routledge, 2002). Contact: Daniel.Nolan@anu.edu.au.

Luis Rosa is a doctoral researcher at Pontifícia Universidade Católica do Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil. His main interests lie in the theories of epistemic justification, epistemic logic and artificial intelligence. His actual research is about puzzles of epistemic defeasibility. He is editor and author of the blog FsOpHo, dedicated exclusively to epistemology and logic. Contact: fsopho@gmail.com.

Michael J. Shaffer is Associate professor of philosophy at St. Cloud State University. His main areas of research interest are in epistemology, logic and the philosophy of science, and he has published many articles on various topics in these areas. He is the secretary and treasurer of the Central States Philosophy Association, is the co-editor of What Place for the A Priori? (Open Court, 2011), and is the author of Counterfactuals and Scientific Realism (Palgrave-MacMillan, 2012) and The Experimental Turn and the Methods of Philosophy (Routledge, forthcoming). Contact: mjshaffer@stcloudstate.edu.

Gabriel Târziu is currently a postdoctoral researcher for the Romanian Academy – Iași Branch. He received his M.A. in theoretical philosophy from the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Bucharest, in 2005, and continued his graduate studies in the same institution, where he received his Ph.D. in January 2010, with a thesis on the philosophy of mathematics. He has a wide interest in topics related to the metaphysical problem of realism, and he specializes in the history and philosophy of science, especially philosophy of mathematics and the relation between mathematics and science. His recent studies include “Quine’s Argument for Mathematical Realism,” “Mathematics, Science and Scientific Realism,” and “The Influence of Social Factors on Scientific and Mathematical Knowledge.” Contact: gabi_tarziu@yahoo.com.

John Turri is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at the University of Waterloo and current holds an Early Researcher Award from the Ontario Ministry of Economic Development and Innovation. He specializes in epistemology, philosophy of language, experimental philosophy, value theory, philosophy of mind, and metaphysics. His publications include, “On the Regress Argument for Infitism” (Synthese, 2009), “Epistemic Invariantism and Speech Act Contextualism” (Philosophical Review, 2010), “The Express Knowledge Account of Assertion” (Australasian Journal of Philosophy, 2011), “Manifest Failure: The Gettier Problem Solved” (Philosophers’ Imprint, 2011), “Mythology of the Factive” (Logos & Episteme, 2011), “Knowledge Guaranteed” (Nous, forthcoming), “Liberal Thinking” (Australasian Journal of Philosophy, forthcoming), and “A Conspicuous Art: Putting Gettier to the Test” (Philosophers’ Imprint, forthcoming). Contact: john.turri@gmail.com.

Gal Yehezkel is a lecturer in Philosophy at the Department of Liberal Arts at Sapir Academic College, and a member of the Department of History, Philosophy and Judaic Studies at the Open University of Israel. Among his publications are “Objectivity and Natural Laws” (Analysis and Metaphysics, forthcoming), “McTaggart, the Flow of Time, and the Disanalogy between Time and Space” (Kriterion, 2009), and “Self-Consciousness, Objectivity, and Time” (Metaphilosophy, 2008). Contact: Yehezkel.G@gmail.com.