Editor's Note

You are holding in your hands—or I suppose looking at on your screen—an issue that is a culmination of the work of many individuals. Over the last two years we have been looking back at the mission of Questions, the possibilities for fulfilling that mission, and the tools we have available for doing so.

Behind the scenes we have been meeting with focus groups of pre-college students, educators, and philosophers. We have been reimagining the way we lay out the submissions. We have rethought and reinterpreted our logo.

If you are among those who have been following us on Twitter and/or Facebook you might see some familiar changes. As we became more certain of what the new look for Questions would be, we starting rolling them out on those media. Some changes have—thus far—remained only on the interwebs. Recently our followers encountered a series of philosophical hakius, prompts for philosophical discussions, and excerpts from classic philosophy. Some of the results from these may end up in a future issue. Or not. We are having as much fun thinking about what to do for you as we have thinking about philosophy. Sometimes ideas do not work out, but we are better for having thought through the possibilities.

As Heraclitus reminds us, we can never step in the same river twice. The dramatic changes we see here for this issue are not the end of the changes coming for us. Change is a constant and we will continue to strive to make Questions better with each issue. Be part of that discussion via Facebook, Twitter, email, or even (gasp!) that old technology of a phone call. We would love to hear what you think of our new look. And what you think we can do to improve more.

Enjoy the issue. Keep in touch.

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

Questions publishes philosophical work by and for young people, including stories, essays, poems, photographs and drawings, etc. In addition, articles related to doing philosophy with young people, reviews of books and materials useful for doing the same, lesson plans (include description or transcripts of student responses), classic thought experiments redefined/modified for modern audience interests and demographics, transcripts of philosophy discussions, photographs of classroom discussions, and more are sought.

Images, whether photographs, drawings, paintings, et al. should be sent as uncompressed TIFF files (with at least 300 dpi resolution.) Written submissions should be sent in Word, WordPerfect, or Rich Text File formats (as .doc, .wpd, or .rtf). Scholarly articles should conform to the Chicago Manual of Style for textual and citation manners; please use endnotes rather than footnotes.

Be sure to include contact information with your submissions. A copyright release is needed for publication. All submissions should go to QuestionsJournal@gmail.com

Submissions for the next issue should be received by March 31, 2013. After initial review and editing, they will be blindly reviewed and selected by the larger editorial board.
