

AUTHORS

CAROLINE CARR is in her junior year at the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, MA. She is double-majoring in political science and philosophy, and minoring in Asian studies. She is interested in all types of philosophy, but especially ancient. She also runs cross-country and track for Holy Cross.

CHARLIE MELMAN is a junior at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N.J., studying philosophy and history with a minor in economics. His most significant philosophical interests are normative ethics, positive duties, the philosophy of criminal law, and the responsibilities of nations. His primary non-philosophical interests are politics, soccer, and macroeconomics.

C.J. OSWALD is a third-year philosophy major at Alma College, which is located in Alma, Michigan. His areas of specialization include the philosophy of mind, philosophy of language, metaphysics, and metametaphysics. His research specifically pertains to the nature of phenomenal experiences, and offering an alternative to the standard Quinean metaontology.

DANE SHADE HANNUM is a senior at Coe College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, majoring in philosophy and environmental studies and minoring in religion. She is currently drawn to legal philosophy and applied ethics, but looks forward to exploring new interests. She will be applying to philosophy graduate programs this coming year.

RICHARD SPRADLIN is a soon-to-be graduating senior at Regis University in Denver, Colorado, pursuing a bachelor of arts in philosophy, with a minor focus in pre-law. As a competitive member of the debate team and ardent lover of philosophy, he is fascinated by rhetoric, language, and their implications for ethics. When not reading Wittgenstein, he can often be found climbing rocks and dropping juggling props.

MIGUEL D. GUERRERO is a third-year philosophy and computer science double major at Lewis & Clark College in Portland, Oregon. Philosophically, he studies (the Mighty) Hegel, as well as ethics and the philosophy of race. Originally from Texas, Miguel is interested in making music and doing meaningful good.

NICOLE B. DOOLEN is a junior at Elon University in North Carolina, majoring in exercise science with minors in neuroscience and psychology. While taking a course in sexual ethics, she became interested in exploring structural inequality within social practices, particularly those related to female sexuality.

RAQUEL ROBLES is an undergraduate student at Coe College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. She will be graduating in the spring of 2016 with majors in philosophy and environmental studies. Her interests include environmental ethics, ethical theory, and sustainability. Her hobbies are camping and playing various video games.

STEVEN DYKSTRA is a fourth-year philosophy major studying at Brock University in his hometown of St. Catharines, Ontario, Canada. He is drawn to ancient Greek philosophers and ethics of all shapes and sizes. Logical proofs are a source of entertainment. Outside of academia, Steven is known to be a good friend of cats, a fierce competitor in video games, and a sarcastic addition to most good conversation.