

Notes on Contributors

Karen Adkins is a Professor of Philosophy at Regis University, where she teaches courses on feminist theory, ethics, and social and political philosophy. Her publications include Gossip, Epistemology, Power (Palgrave, 2017), book chapters, and articles in Social Philosophy Today, Social Epistemology, Hypatia, Teaching Philosophy, and other journals.

Erik A. Anderson is Associate Professor of Philosophy and Chair of the Philosophy Department at Furman University in Greenville, SC. He received his Ph.D. in philosophy from the University of Connecticut in 2001. His teaching and research are in ethics, political philosophy, and philosophy of law. He has published articles in Faith and Philosophy, Ethical Theory and Moral Practice, and The Journal of Social Philosophy.

Joshua Anderson is an Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Virginia State University. Their research focuses on questions of global justice, and political philosophy more generally. Their book, Justice, Community and Globalization: Groundwork to a Communal-Cosmopolitanism, was recently released in paperback by Routledge.

Anaja Arthur is pursuing a Bachelor of Arts with a major in Medical Anthropology at Creighton University. Her primary research interests include feminist theory and philosophy of race.

Margaret Betz is an Assistant Teaching Professor of Philosophy at Rutgers University, Camden. She is the author of various articles and chapters on feminist philosophy, environmental ethics, political philosophy and the book, The Hidden Philosophy of Hannah Arendt. She is working on a book on political violence.

Ashley J. Bohrer is currently Assistant Professor at the University of Notre Dame. Bohrer's first book, Marxism and Intersectionality: Race, Gender, Class, and Sexuality under Contemporary Capitalism, is available from Transcript Verlag and Columbia University Press.

Hannah Frazer is pursuing a Bachelor of Arts with majors in Philosophy and Psychology at Creighton University. Her main philosophical interests focus on moral philosophy, philosophy of gender, and philosophy of the law.

Shannon Fyfe is an Assistant Professor of Philosophy at George Mason University, where she is also a Fellow in the Institute for Philosophy and Public Policy, and an Adjunct Professor at the Antonin Scalia Law School. She holds both a Ph.D. in philosophy and a J. D. from Vanderbilt University. Her main research interests are in legal philosophy, ethics, and political philosophy, with a particular focus on international conflict and accountability. She published International Criminal Tribunals: A Normative Defense (with Larry May) with Cambridge University Press, 2017.

Alex R. Gillham is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at St. Bonaventure University, where he co-directs the Center for Law & Society and organizes the Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Lecture Series. Gillham's research focuses on issues in ethics, ancient philosophy, and philosophy of religion.

Kevin Graham is Associate Professor and Chair of Philosophy at Creighton University. He is the author of Beyond Redistribution: White Supremacy and Racial Justice (Lexington Books, 2010) as well as numerous articles in social and political philosophy, the philosophy of race, and the scholarship of teaching and learning.

Ali Griswold is pursuing a Bachelor of Arts with majors in Philosophy and Psychology at Creighton University. Her interests include women's and gender studies and ethics. She has primarily participated in research surrounding the complexities of racial inequality.

Emma Kitteringham earned her Bachelor of Arts with majors in History and Philosophy at Creighton University. Her primary research interests include the history of oppression, environmental ethics, and feminist philosophy.

Quinlyn Klade earned a Bachelor of Science with majors in Biochemistry and Philosophy from Creighton University. Her philosophical interests include the philosophy of gender and social philosophy.

Alycia LaGuardia-LoBianco is an Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Grand Valley State University where she teaches and researches on feminist philosophy, ethics, and philosophy of psychiatry. She is especially curious about how experiences of oppression, trauma, and mental illness (and their intersections) can shape moral agency and the ways this should inform ethical action guidance.

Mark Lance is professor of philosophy and professor and co-director in the program on justice and peace at Georgetown. He is the author with Quill Kukla of 'Yo!' And 'Lo!': The pragmatic topography of the space of reasons, The Grammar of Meaning with John Hawthorne, and many articles in philosophy of language, philosophical logic, metaethics, political philosophy, nonviolence, anarchism, and epistemology. He has also been an activist and organizer for more than 35 years on a wide range of social justice issues.

Jaliya Nagahawatte is pursuing a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration with majors in Business Intelligence & Analytics and Financial Technology at Creighton University. The son of Sri Lankan immigrants, the intersection of racial identity and philosophy is a topic close to his own heart.