In This Issue

The Future of Work
A Special Issue of Business and Professional Ethics Journal
Guest Editor: Martin Schlag

Martin Schlag

Andrea Roncella and Marta Bertolaso
A Generative Paradigm for Human Work: Meritocracy and Value Creation in a Post COVID-19 World ................. 331

Kenneth S. Mias
The Paradoxes of Work and Human Flourishing in the Age of Autonomous Technology.................................................. 353

Robert A. Gahl Jr.
The Challenge of Self-Mastery in the Future of Work................................. 367

Domène Melé
Humanizing Industry 4.0: Some Criteria Drawn from Catholic Social Teaching................................. 385

Kristin Gottron
Dignity beyond Measure: Designing Big Data Systems with the Worker in Mind................................. 411

Karel Sovak
Ushering Human Dignity into the Era of Globalized, Human-less Technology.................................................. 431

Rev. Dr. Richard Turnbull
Work as Enterprise in an Age of Robots........................................... 445
Geoffrey C. Friesen
Human Flourishing and the Self-Limiting Assumptions of Modern Finance ......................................................... 465

Agna Fernandez and C. Joe Arun
Enabling Learning to Develop Personal Capability for Human Flourishing: Constructing a Model through Grounded Theory .... 485

Frances Jeanne L. Sarmiento
Depicting the Two “Faces” of Labor Contracting and Their Effects in the Philippines ........................................ 501

Maciej Bazela
Technology as a Response to the Challenges of Aging Society and Shrinking Labor Markets:
What Can We Learn From the Case of Japan? ............................... 525

Arnd Küppers
Migration, Labor, and Welfare:
An Attempt at a Social Ethical Evaluation ................................... 547

Notes on Contributors ................................................................ 565