Table of Contents
Volume XXIX | 2022

Philosophy and the Environment

Editors’ Introduction
Nathan Beaucage and Polina Whitehouse .......................................................... v

Environmental Philosophy at the Edges of Science
Bryan G. Norton .......................................................... 1

Is a Philosophy of Nature Still Tenable?
Michael Marder .......................................................... 21

Platonic Love of Nonhuman Nature and Animals
Elisa Aaltola .......................................................... 33

Against Relational Value
Simon P. James .......................................................... 45

Politics and Ecology among Calvino’s Trees: An Exercise in Narrative Scholarship and the Environmental Humanities
Serenella Iovino .......................................................... 55

Intergenerational Ethics, Moral Ambivalence, and Climate Change
Marion Hourdequin .......................................................... 69

In Lieu of an Environmental Ethic:
Beauty, Good Lives, and the Preservation of Nature
Daniel M. Haybron .......................................................... 89

An Interview with J. Baird Callicott
Nathan Beaucage and Noemi Iten .......................................................... 121

An Interview with Holmes Rolston III
Sam Libenson and Justin Wong .......................................................... 131

An Interview with Peter Singer
Noemi Iten and Sam Libenson .......................................................... 137