Techné: Research in Philosophy and Technology
Volume 25, Issue 1 (2021)

Articles

Is There a Digital World? Video Games as a Framework for Analyzing the Relations between Software and Lived Experience
Luca M. Possati .................................................................................................................. 1

The Darwin Is in the Details: The Evolution of Electronics
Michael Gurvitch ........................................................................................................... 26

What Is Innovation?
Laying the Ground for a Philosophy of Innovation
Vincent Blok .................................................................................................................... 72

Cultures of Number:
Connections across Literature, Design, and Technology
Thomas Lee ....................................................................................................................... 97

Urban Infrastructure and the Problem of Moral Praise
Shane Epting .................................................................................................................... 112

The Sacrality of Things: On the Technological Augmentation of the Sacred
Levi Checketts .................................................................................................................. 130

Special Section on Technology & Pandemic

The Zoom-bie Student and the Lecturer
Galit Wellner ................................................................................................................ 153

Big Brother Goes to School
Ryan Jenkins, Zachary I. Rentz, and Keith Abney ..................................................... 162

Book Reviews

A Competent Guide to the Ethics of Humans and Robots
Review of Humans and Robots: Ethics, Agency, and Anthropomorphism, by Sven Nyholm
Simon N. Balle ............................................................................................................. 184

Representation’s Essence
Review of Thinking Like a Computer, by George Towner
Sasha Niehorster-Cook ...................................................................................................... 191