“One of the most comprehensive, well-researched, and accessible guides for teachers that I have ever seen.”
—James Lang, Chronicle of Higher Education

Teach Philosophy 101 (TΦ101) is a unique collection of open access resources for philosophy teachers. It presents strategies and planning tools for faculty members and graduate assistants who teach philosophy courses, especially at the introductory level. The mission of TΦ101 is to enhance undergraduate student learning in introductory philosophy courses by providing free, user-friendly strategies and resources to everyone in the academic community. All materials are provided on a Creative Commons open source license. Download whatever you need.

www.teachphilosophy101.org

TΦ101 is edited by Prof. Emily Esch, with support from the College of Saint Benedict and Saint John’s University. TΦ101 was created by John Immerwahr at Villanova University and the Philosophy Documentation Center provides a permanent home for this great resource.
Philosophy Documentation Center’s E-COLLECTION contains essential journals, book series, and other publications in applied ethics, philosophy, religious studies, and related fields. The collection continues to expand and coverage of most titles is complete.

About Us

The Philosophy Documentation Center is a specialized publisher that has been serving scholars on a non-profit basis since 1966. It has earned a reputation for excellence with the publication of journals, book series, conference proceedings, reference works, and other materials in philosophy, applied ethics, religious studies and related fields. We provide a full range of print and electronic publishing services, including secure hosting and access solutions for institutions, individuals, and learned societies. We also provide customized production support and digitization services for publications in many languages.

PDC has a unique commitment to the philosophical community. We support essential open access projects such as TeachPhilosophy101, PhilPapers, the Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy. We also support the International Federation of Philosophical Societies with a variety of services, and co-sponsor the annual Prize for Excellence and Innovation in Philosophy Programs with the American Philosophical Association.
