
Contents

An interview with Professor Hilary Putnam, 85

Francis Danby: a portrait drawing, 92

Consciousness: defending the functionalist approach, 93

Peter Smith

The second of two papers that argue the merits of functionalism

Is patriotism a virtue? 98

Martin Hughes

The conflicts of nationalism have made ours a particularly bloody century. Can we still claim that patriotism is virtuous?

Cartesian dualism and its problems, 104

R.S. Woolhouse

A discussion of the reception and criticism of Descartes' ideas by seventeenth and early-eighteenth century thinkers

Early Greek philosophers on the infinite, 110

A.W. Moore

Is the infinite that which is without limit or a perfect whole? Early Greek philosophers developed both ideas and met some unexpected problems

Problems with the theory of ideology, 117

Elizabeth Frazer

The concept of ideology is still in good health despite some of its shortcomings

Worlds of art and works of art, 122

R.A. Sharpe

Is King Lear a work of art because it is held to be so by the art establishment, or because it is the possession of a whole community?

Belief as action, 127

Paul Helm

We cannot choose what to believe, but we can decide to adopt a belief policy

Morality and humour, 132

Colin Radford

What do morality and humour have in common?

Some current options in philosophy of mind, 136

Andrew Jack

Have I a mind distinct from my body?

Puzzles and posers, 141

Mary Haight

Nathan Detroit's guide to free will and determinism

The Institute for the Advancement of Philosophy for Children—looking backward and looking forward, 143

Matthew Lipman

Teachers' forum, 145

Letters, 146

Editor's booknotes and books received, 148

Philosophy news, 151