INSIDER'S REPORT ON RESPONSIBLE BUSINESS

NOVEMBER/DECEMBER 1998

VOL. 12, NO. 6

OPINION

4 Musings

Laissez faire has failed, Fortune magazine declared in 1938. Judging by the global financial crisis that's brewing, we have to learn this lesson twice.

6 Progressive Economics

Students for Humane and Responsible Economics at Harvard challenge the notion that classical economics is "value-free."

9 Book Snacks

Creating the Corporate Soul tells the history of "corporate imagery"... Cannibals With Forks outlines the seven revolutions needed to reach sustainability... Disgruntled gives vent to pissed-off employees.

NEWS & TRENDS

5 Company Watch

Why U.S. West's pay-for-performance plan infuriated employees... Unfair debt collection tactics at GE Capital... Deceptive sales at State Farm... BP creates first-ever "internal emissions trading system"... Is your salary competitive?

7 Warning Signs

The "death penalty" for corporations comes of age: A law school professor wants to revoke Unocal's charter, while a judge goes after the charters of cigarette makers.

17 What Would You Do?

(Un)truth in marketing: Dr. Charles had clients believing the company had a product ready for production, when it didn't.

COVER STORY

10 The 10th Annual Business Ethics Awards

A salute to three outstanding companies demonstrating leadership in ethics and social responsibility: SmithKline Beecham goes gunning for a terrorist worm... Wainwright Bank practices social justice inside and out... S.C. Johnson waxes eloquently.

13 Other Finalists for the Business Ethics Awards

Kaiser Permanente subsidizes health care for the uninsured... Fannie Mae works for a double bottom line... TD Industries makes "servant leadership" a reality.

14 A Look at Past Award Winners

On our 10th anniversary, we review the 27 winners from the past nine years.

DOUBLE YIELD

19 There's Gold in Municipal Bonds

While others dive into U.S. Treasury bonds, social investors should give a look to high-grade (tax-free) municipal bonds.

21 The Proof Is in the Equation: It Pays to be Green

Surprise again! New research shows companies going beyond compliance see enhanced profits.

20 Impact of the Business Ethics 100 on Stock Prices

Surprise! It pays (immediately) to be ethical.
